

Undiscovered Planet

Sitting in the darkness,
What we call space,
Is an unknown existence,
In a shadowed place.

Yet to be discovered,
A new sight to see,
With all its unique features,
That stick like memories.

Separated from the solar system,
Stranded in thin air,
Why does nobody question,
What's really there?

A new perspective,
A place to think,
If only someone could find,
This hidden link.

Ellie Faulkner

Age 11

The Archbishop's School

Canterbury